HOW CAN YOU HELP?

The #1 thing that immigrants can do to protect themselves and their families during interactions with US Immigration agents is to know the rights they have in the US today, regardless of their immigration status.

Now Karen, it is NOT your mission to walk up to every person you hear speaking a language other than English and demand they listen to your TED talk about the rights and protections granted to all under the US Constitution. We know that you can't discern a person's immigration status just by looking at them or by listening to them speak, right? So, this is how you can provide those at risk of detention or deportation with information about their rights as a human in the US:

The Immigrant Legal Resource Center has designed "Red Cards". These cards are designed to fit in a wallet and contain information for humans during a confrontation with ICE Agents.

Do you have access to a printer? If not, there is one at your local public library.

Additionally, the next page of this guide can be torn out and distributed.

Karen, your mission, should you choose to accept it; print out these cards and make sure they get into the hands of people that can use them.

But, not, like, directly. That would be weird.

Leave them in places known to be frequented by your local immigrant population- like an international grocer. If you're unsure, ask your local public librarian. They are the literal best and answering questions is their business and pleasure.

Learn simple common phrases in the native language of your local immigrant community.

Familiarize yourself with the difference between a Judicial and Administrative Warrant

Save your local tipline number in your phone

Learn the local laws and regulations that might impact your rights during an interaction with ICE.

Decide NOW what you want the extent of your involvement to be.
Would you (Y/N):

- Call a Hotline?
- Ask Agents if they are ICE or Police?
- Ask Agents who they are looking for?
- Attempt to verbally warn a neighborhood about the presence of ICE Agents?
- Record an interaction between Agents and Immigrants?
- Speak up if you see Agents violating a person's Rights?
- Remain in the area if Agents told you to leave?

Ask school administrators for their policies for interacting with US Immigration Agents.

Example Questions:

- Ask school administrators for their policies for interacting with US Immigration Agents.
- What policies or regulations are you bound to if Immigration tries to enter the school and detain students?
- Will you allow US Immigration Agents to enter the school building without a Judicial Warrant?
- Will this school allow minor students to speak with ICE Agents in the absence of their legal guardian?
- Are you required to contact the parent if a student has an interaction with an ICE Agent?

Spotting an ICE (U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement) stakeout can be challenging because agents are typically trained to blend in and remain discreet. However, there are a few signs that might give it away:

Unmarked Vehicles

ICE agents often use unmarked cars that blend into the surroundings. Look for vehicles that seem out of place, parked in one spot for an extended period, or following a pattern that doesn't seem to fit the local traffic flow.

Increased Activity in the Area

If you suddenly notice an uptick in law enforcement activity, such as patrol cars or unmarked vehicles around a specific location, this might indicate an operation is underway, including a stakeout.

Surveillance Equipment

If you see agents using cameras or binoculars, particularly if they seem to be observing a specific area, it could indicate a stakeout.

Plainclothes Agents*

Agents might be dressed in civilian clothing, but their behavior might suggest they're involved in surveillance. They could be standing or sitting in one spot for a long time, or even walking around the area repeatedly.

There have been some reports that as of 1/26/25, ICE Agents were ordered to wear their uniforms and insignia for photo ops. I'm not joking.*

Unusual Behavior

Watch for people who are acting overly cautious or seem to be observing others closely without engaging in normal activities. For example, someone pacing back and forth, looking around nervously, or frequently checking their phone could be part of the surveillance team.

Presence of Multiple People

If you notice a few individuals hanging around the same area without obvious reasons to be there, it could indicate surveillance. In some cases, they might appear to be communicating with each other in a subtle way, like through hand signals or using a walkie-talkie.

THINK YOU SEE AGENTS GETTING READY TO CONDUCT A RAID BUT YOU'RE NOT SURE?

ASK THE AGENTS, KAREN. JUST ASK THEM.

THEY MIGHT LIE TO YOU, BUT ALSO THEY MIGHT NOT...?

HOW TO SPOT A STAKEOUT

REMEMBER, ICE WATCH GROUPS ARE TRAINED TO VERIFY THE PERCEIVED THREAT.

HERE ARE SOME THINGS TO KEEP IN MIND:

Don't post an unverified threat online!

I know it feels like the right thing to do is to blast out the info to as many people as possible- but without your ICE Watch group validating the threat, you could be needlessly causing humans in your community to panic.

...Don't be THAT Karen. To you, it's just a well-intentioned mistake. To others you've incited their fight-or-flight response and may cause them to do something that could put them at further risk. Just wait.

Call La Linea or whatever hotline is in your area and ask THEM if you can go ahead and post it online.

POP QUIZ, HOTSHOT

You are walking your dog and see a family walking toward you that is speaking a language other than English.

You want to introduce yourself.

What ELSE should you do?

OPTION 1- Tear out a Red Card from the prior page of this zine and hand it to them

OPTION 2 - Say, "Don't worry I will let you know if ICE is in the area" and then teach them the difference between a Judicial and Administrative Warrants

OPTION 3- Shake their hand

OMG KAREN! NOT EVERY PERSON THAT SPEAKS A LANGUAGE OTHER THAN ENGLISH IS UNDOCUMENTED. YOU CAN'T POSSIBLY KNOW THEIR IMMIGRATION STATUS JUST BY LOOKING AT THEM AND HEARING THEM TALK! GO RE-READ THE GOOD IMMIGRANT EDITED BY NIKESH SHUKLA AND RE-TAKE THE QUIZ

BABY, IT'S COLD OUTSIDE...

Make sure you have the phone number of your local ICE Watch teams.

These teams are trained to validate threats and stop the spread of misinformation.

Be prepared to provide the following information:

1. Whether you witnessed the situation yourself or you were told by someone else.
2. The exact location of the situation you witnessed.
3. A detailed description of the events, including car makes and models.

"Ok I called and reported it. Now what?"

That depends on you, K.

But I know what I would do...

BE LOUD!
Make sure everyone in the immediate area is aware of the situation. Announce the presence of ICE Agents in English and the local population's first language (if known).
